This is our 14th edition of Good News Sunday Fairfield. We want to continue bringing you good and heartwarming stories in these difficult times.

A TSA officer named Martin helped a lost family trying to go to Portland, Maine from Portland, Oregon. They were trying to get to Portland, Maine but were booked on a flight to Portland, Oregon instead. When Martin noticed that they were “confused and disheartened” he decided to help and with some of his own money booked the right flight for the Spanish speaking financially struggling family. How can we help people in need?

Ryan was in a bad car accident and barely made it and can only put 20 pounds on his left arm and can't walk for more than two hours in a day. And during the winter storm in Texas, he has been driving around in his truck and with the help of some people and more four-wheel drive vehicles he tows stranded cars in the ice. He managed to rescue 98 cars on Monday and another 47 cars on Tuesday and according to the outlet asking for nothing in return. He would help anyone he found on the side of the road and in some of these rides he has been transporting patients and nurses from local medical centers to their homes. On top of that he also drove people to places with utilities because a lot of the home don't have them. How can you help people struggling.

Remember last week we suggested that you gave something sweet to someone for Valentine's day? One family wrote a very nice note and put $50 on an envelope. They gave to a restaurant worker.

Frank Rothwell became the oldest person to row the Atlantic unassisted across the Atlantic Ocean. He did this to raise money for Alzheimer's research and as a tribute to his brother-in-law who died from Alzheimer's disease. 70-year-old Frank set off from the Canary Islands on December 12 to start the 3,000-mile journey that he finished in only 56 days one week before schedule! It took over 18 months of training to do the trip in about 6 weeks. His goal was to raise 1 million euros but with the help of 9,400 donors he raised £1,048,783 for research. You can go to www.alz.org to donate to help research Alzheimer's disease.
